Editor The Star: Last Wednesday, Sept. 27, the enclosed AP article appeared in The Star stating that when Roberto Clemente got four more hits he would be the 9th man to have gotten as many as 3,000 base hits in the whole history of baseball.

As any baseball fan knows, he will be the 11th player to reach 3,000. The following have gotten 3,000 or more hits:

Ty Cobb	4,191
Stan Musial	3,630
Tris Speaker	3,615
Honus Wagner	3,439
Edward Collins	3,313
Napoleon Lajoie	3,262
Paul Waner	3,152
Cap Anson	3,081
Hank Aaron	3,272
Willie Mays	3,178

As you can see, Roberto Clemente would be the 11th. Sincerely,

EUGENE S. HORNER

Mr. Horner is so right. The main difference between a professional sports writer and a sports fan is that the professional operates from a sports encyclopedia, or is supposed to. But if he doesn't look up the record and some fan with an encyclopedia of his own does look it up, then the professional is on the short end of the stick.

I realize I am dated—for I saw Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker play, and in more recent years saw Stan Musial hit a homer in Busch Stadium, St. Louis, against the Phillies.

Thanks, Mr. Horner, for your letter.

J. R. McKinley isn't above promoting tourism for the benefit of his own region while conducting his column From This Small Corner in the De Queen Daily Citizen. But this excerpt is effective enough to fetch some Star readers up his way one of these fine Autumn week-ends:

Places I must visit dept.—Mize Crossing, on the Cossatot. I've floated the river from Three Chutes to Clinton more times than I care to recall, but never actually had Mize Crossing pinpointed.

Now, it seems, Weyerhaeuser Company has built a low-water bridge there, has done a whole batch of road work and made accessible to the Sunday afternoon tourists some mighty scenic country.

Speaking of Weyerhaeuser, when that firm recently announced its pine-cone-collection program someone was quoted as saying a person could earn up to as much as $40 per day if they hustled.

Some skeptics, naturally, whistled at the figure.

Whistle no more. We know of one "little old gal" who earned over $21 in just three hours.

Tucker visits county

Jim Guy Tucker of Little Rock, Democratic candidate for attorney general, spoke at an informal gathering of the Democratic Women's Club and other guests in the small courtroom of the Hempstead County Courthouse on Tuesday evening, Oct. 3.

Introduced by the club's vice president, Mrs. Crit Stuart Jr., Tucker discussed the operation of the office of attorney general and gave high praise to Atty. Gen. Ray Thornton. He lamented the need for more effective consumer protection.

Deploing the increase in youthful crime, he said that there is too little understanding of criminal law by people of all ages. To correct this an educational program should be started as young as the junior high school age level. "Some of our criminal statutes are outdated and should be corrected," he also added.

Carlos Crist of Marvell, a member of Tucker's campaign staff, accompanied him to the meeting.

Candidate 'stumps' in county

Jim Guy Tucker, Democratic candidate for attorney general visited Hope Tuesday and attended a reception at the county courthouse where he engaged in conversation with several local women, including Mrs. Monroe Stuart of

McGovern to give end-of-war plan

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
Sen. George McGovern will announce on Oct. 10 a plan to end the Indochina war, his campaign aides say. It will be part of an intensive antiwar campaign by his supporters during the Columbus Day weekend.

McGovern "will tell America what Richard Nixon cannot: how a president of the United States can bring all of our servicemen out of Vietnam and back to America," said Lawrence O'Brien, chairman of McGovern's Democratic presidential campaign.

But Vice President Spiro T. Agnew hinted that the Nixon administration may have some peace developments of its own to announce. There are "some things I can't relate" concerning attempts to settle the war, he told newsmen in Great Falls, Mont., Tuesday.

McGovern, who planned appearances in Buffalo and New York City today, criticized Nixon's administration spending policies, saying Nixon is trying to escape responsibility for "the mammoth budget deficit projected for 1973."

He said the budget deficit during Nixon's first term may exceed $100 billion and accused the administration of conducting a "political con game" in its demands for a $250 billion ceiling on federal spending.

"Any labor leader who tells you to vote for Richard Nixon is telling you to vote against your own interests—to slash your own throats—to vote against the labor movement," he said.

President Nixon has not scheduled any campaign appearances this week. Vice President Agnew campaigned for the ticket in Indiana and Montana. He planned to go today to South Dakota, McGovern's home state, and to Nebraska.

In Great Falls, he praised the administration's initiatives in farm exports, saying they mean "cash in the pockets of American farmers." He also said the Democratic Congress has acted on only six of 31 administration proposals on the environment.

The Nixon campaign organization Tuesday began dispatching 9.3 million letters to lists of voters in California,

New Jersey, Illinois and Pennsylvania. A spokesman said the goal is to increase the Nixon vote by 2 per cent over what it would otherwise be.

American Party presidential candidate John Schmitz said in Atlanta, Ga., Tuesday his party will be listed on the ballots in at least 32 states and he has an "excellent" chance of winning in California.

Mail-order pitch in Spanish from Nixon set today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today the postman will deliver a mail-order pitch from President Nixon to Spanish-speaking voters in California.

"Al fin, un amigo en la Casa Blanca," it reads. Translated: "At last a friend in the White House."

This special appeal to Spanish-Americans, primarily those of Mexican, Puerto Rican and Cuban origin, is part of a sophisticated, multimillion dollar fusillade of letters Nixon has aimed at a few carefully selected segments of voters in larger states.

The targets include not only Spanish-Americans but elderly Republicans, urban and suburban Republicans and other groups thought ripe for special appeals.

Tuesday, 9.3 million letters were sent to hand-picked lists of voters in California, New Jersey, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

Eventually, the direct-mail campaign will spread to a total of 10 states as letters to out to New York, Ohio, Michigan, Texas, Maryland and Connecticut, a Nixon campaign spokesman said.

Together, these 10 states, where Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern generally is concentrating his own personal appearances, account for 246 of the 270 electoral votes required to win the Nov. 7 election.

China's first speech slams U.S., Russia

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — China's first policy speech in the U.N. General Assembly hit the Soviet Union, the United States and their newly ratified strategic arms limitation agreements, but it was harder on the Russians than the Americans.

Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua told the 133-nation assembly Tuesday that the pact was not "a step towards nuclear disarmament" but "the beginning of a new state in the Soviet-U.S. nuclear arms race" because they neither limited the quality nor required the destruction of such arms.

He spoke the same day President Nixon and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, in Washington formalities, brought into force two pacts signed in Moscow May 26 — a treaty limiting each country to 800 defensive missiles and an executive agreement putting a five-year freeze on offensive missile stocks.

Chiao's 60-minute speech in the assembly's general debate was the first since the Chinese Communists replaced the Chinese Nationalists in the United Nations last year.

He alleged there was "Soviet-U.S. collaboration for world domination" and said that for the United Nations to regain its prestige, it must "free itself from the manipulation and control by the big powers." Two of his positions struck observers as new. He came out for review and possible revision of the U.N. charter, opposed by (Continued on page two.)

Invitation withdrawn by Smith

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — An invitation to Gov. Dale Bumpers to visit religious projects of the Smith Foundation at Eureka Springs was withdrawn Tuesday by Gerald L. K. Smith of Eureka Springs.

Smith told a group at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock that Bumpers had been pressured to stay away from the projects, "because I am supposed to be a bigot."

Smith said that Bumpers visited Carroll County last Friday, but "didn't have the nerve to stop at Eureka Springs" to see the religious projects.

"So, I am going to say to Mr. Bumpers — I have taken the red carpet back and put it in the storehouse, and if you come to Eureka Springs and want to see the Passion Play, you will have to step up to the ticket office and buy your own ticket," Smith said.

F111 back in Vietnam action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon acknowledged today that the swing-wing F111 fighter-bombers were pulled from combat after the loss of one of the planes Thursday, but said the jets returned to action today.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said a formal announcement of new air strikes over North Vietnam in which F111s participated will be made later by the U.S. Command in Saigon.

Mother wants no charity, just tombstones

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — "She wants no help other than public support to put her own grave stones back," says the mother of Cynthia Frederick.

"Can you make it clear that Cindy wants no charity?"

Cynthia, 21, spent hours patiently and gently fashioning grave markers for her two children, both of whom died hours after birth.

But cemetery officials removed the headstones and hauled them away because they are made of concrete. A 1931 city ordinance specifies grave stones must be made of granite or bronze.

The stones, placed on the graves Aug. 26, now are languishing beside a cemetery maintenance shed.

Cynthia, who discovered about two weeks ago that the markers had been removed, left Monday to join her husband, Douglas, 21, who has a two-year hitch remaining with the U.S. Army at Stuttgart, West Germany. Her departure came one day before the cemetery committee of the city Park Board decided against granting an exception in the case.

"We didn't realize we should have gone to the meeting," Cynthia's mother, Mrs. George Griffin said Tuesday.

Mrs. Griffin said that before Cynthia left she wrote a letter to City Councilman Jack Woods: "This was a request to reset the stones," Mrs. Griffin said. "Cynthia had no idea an organization like the cemetery board even existed, so she didn't write a formal request."

Mrs. Griffin added that she and her husband are asking permission to speak before the Park Board at its next meeting Tuesday to make a formal request that they be allowed to reset the stones.

Cynthia is a diabetic who has been told to have no more children.

Her first, Benjamin James, was born March 8, 1971, and died nine hours later. Her second, Christa Ann, died Jan. 5, 1972, after living eight hours. Both died of hyaline membrane disease.

The grave stones Cynthia made carry the normal inscriptions. One stone is light pink, the other greyish blue. They are reinforced with steel, engraved in black lettering and are coated with plastic.

Smuggled space coin is sold

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A 179-year-old U.S. coin secreted on board the Gemini 7 spacecraft in 1965 was sold recently for $15,000, but could now be worth as much as $100,000, The Associated Press learned Tuesday.

The coin is a 1793 large cent which normally sells in numismatic circles for about $2,000. A space agency spokesman, in response to a query from

The AP, admitted that the coin had been slipped aboard Gemini 7, the 14-day earth orbit space mission in 1965. The spokesman claimed that no one connected with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, including astronauts Frank Borman and James Lovell, profited from the transaction.

In a prepared statement, the space agency said, "The coin was placed in the in-flight medical kit by Dr. Howard Minners, a flight surgeon who left NASA several years ago."

The coin, said the statement, was the property of William Ulrich, a coin dealer then living in Minneapolis, Minn. NASA said that after the mission Minners and Gemini 7 astronauts Borman and Lovell signed a letter certifying the coin had been in space and then returned it to Ulrich.

Ulrich sold the coin two months ago to William Fox Steinberg, a long-time coin dealer in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Contacted at his home in the Bahamas Islands, Ulrich, now retired, said he sold the coin for $5,000 in cash, plus a $10,000 lot located next to the Lucaya golf course on Grand Bahama Island.

Ulrich said he now regretted the sale.

"I wouldn't even consider selling it if I had it today," he said. "That coin could be worth today anything up to $100,000." Ulrich refused to answer questions about any participation in the profits of the coin sale by Borman, Lovell or Minners.

Ulrich said he had originally tried to get a rare 1854 gold dollar—one of only four made in Charlotte, N.C.—aboard the spacecraft.

Borman, he said, declined to take the coin because it was "too valuable a coin to be lost to the world" should something happen to the spacecraft.

Instead, Ulrich submitted the penny and it was flown.

Ulrich said he knew Minners well and at that time talked to him frequently by telephone.

Minners, contacted at his Bethesda, Md. home, however, tells a different story of the coin that went into space.

The doctor said he put the coin aboard the spacecraft as a favor to a man he had never met.

"This fellow wrote to me and asked if it was possible," said Minners, now with the National Institute of Health. "It wasn't anything spectacular at that time ... to me, this was just one more public relations type of thing done in the space program."

Minners said he slipped the coin into the Gemini 7 in-flight medical kit without the knowledge of Borman and Lovell. He removed the coin on the recovery ship USS Wasp, after the space flight, and showed it to the astronauts. Later, he said, they all three signed a letter and sent it with the coin back to Ulrich.

"I'm a coin collector and I never thought it was worthwhile," he said. "I had a 1793 cent at that time. I wouldn't want to take the chance of sending it up into space. I perceived it as a risk."

Minners stated emphatically: "There was no financial consideration to myself or to the astronauts."

At that time, said Minners, "It wasn't that much of a big deal," and he doesn't recall then reading any regulations forbidding it.

New NASA regulations controlling such items were handed down recently after it was revealed the Apollo 15 astronauts arranged to profit by $7,000 a piece from stamp covers carried by them into space. They later declined the money, but were reprimanded.

NASA has since also revealed other profiteering schemes by astronauts, including the selling of autographs and the unauthorized carrying into space of wrist watches. The new regulations limit to 12 the items astronauts may carry into space and strictly forbid profiteering.

"Foxy" Steinberg, the Fort Lauderdale man who bought the Gemini 7 coin, said he doesn't plan to "commercialize" with the old penny, but did not: "It really belongs in the Smithsonian. The first big man who comes along who wants to buy for a museum, we'll be glad to part with it."

The sale would not, however, he said, be "to anyone who would demean the space program."

Hike in minimum wage is doomed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An increase in the federal minimum wage appears doomed. The House has refused for the second time to hold a conference with the Senate to work out a compromise.

Republicans and Southern Democrats, who want assurances the Senate bill will be scaled down before they agree to a conference, teamed up to defeat the motion for a conference, 196 to 188.

Last Aug. 1 the conservative coalition triumphed by the same eight-vote margin, 196 to 190. Rep. John H. Dent, D-Pa., manager of the bill, says he will not try again this session.

Besides leaving the minimum wage at $1.60 an hour, the vote drove a wedge between urban and rural congressmen that could make it hard to pass farm legislation in the future.

Just before the vote was taken, Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., head of a bloc of liberal Northern Democrats, reminded Farm Belt congressmen that major crop legislation will expire next year.

If the minimum-wage legislation fails, Burton said, "it will be difficult to get members from the big cities to see and vote for the interests of the rural areas."

Farm opposition was centered on provisions in the Senate bill that would require food and agricultural processors to pay overtime to employees. Most of their work is of a seasonal nature and they are now exempt from overtime pay.

The chief aim of the conservatives is to assure that the final version of the legislation contains a lower wage for workers under 18 than for other full-time employees.

The House-passed bill, written by the conservative coalition, would keep the minimum at $1.60 for teen-agers but would raise the basic rate to $1.80 two months from now and to $2 a year later.

The Senate bill would raise the rate to $2 two months from

Bombing hike ordered in VN

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. command ordered a stepped-up B52 bombing campaign in the Saigon region today to counter Communist plans for a wave of attacks timed to influence the U.S. presidential elections next month, senior officials said.

Meanwhile, the Command disclosed in a delayed report that three American helicopters supporting South Vietnamese troops were hit by enemy ground fire within an hour of each other Monday near the district town of Ben Cat, 25 miles north of Saigon.

The Command said two of the helicopters sustained light damage and returned safely to their bases, while the third made a crash-landing and was destroyed. A total of three crewmen were wounded in the three incidents, the Command said.

Senior officers reported that South Vietnamese field commanders had shifted their forces closer to Saigon to defend major installations near the South Vietnamese capital, including the big base at Bien Hoa and Long Binh where hundreds of American support troops and airmen are still stationed.

Thirty B52 bombers struck enemy targets on four sides of Saigon. U.S. officers said the strikes were aimed primarily at new stockpiles of war materials and were ordered intensified after earlier raids proved successful.

Over North Vietnam, Typhoon Lorna sharply curtailed U.S. air operations, military sources said. The U.S. Command reported only 120 fighter-bomber strikes over the North Tuesday.

The U.S. 7th Fleet reported the Enterprise, the world's only nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, returned to the war zone Tuesday and some of its 75 jets flew missions against enemy targets in South Vietnam. The 90,000-ton carrier replaces the Hancock, leaving the strength of the 7th fleet at six carriers.

Military sources said the controversial F111 swing-wing fighter-bomber remained out of combat after one of the jets mysteriously vanished with two crewmembers aboard Thursday night.

Typhoon Lorna crossed the North Vietnamese coast near Vinh, 145 miles above the demilitarized zone, shortly after midnight. Its course was northwesterly into the northern panhandle of North Vietnam where it was reported dissipating.

Associated Press correspondent Holger Jensen reported from Da Nang that the typhoon also dropped rain on five South Vietnamese provinces to the north and south of Da Nang below the DMZ, virtually bringing allied military operations in the northern region to a halt.

A mortar attack that hit the provincial capital of Hoi An, 15 miles south of Da Nang, and an explosion that ripped through a school in Quang Ngai province 60 miles farther south killed one Vietnamese and wounded 19, the Saigon command said.

South Vietnamese military sources said the Communist command's latest "highpoint" of activity, in which the number of attacks countrywide has risen sharply, has spread into the 3rd Military Region. This region includes Saigon and 11 surrounding provinces.

The most significant raids reported overnight were a shelling attack on the big Lai Khe military base 30 miles north of Saigon and an assault on government militiamen 40 miles east of the capital. Fighting also was reported near An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon.

The latest "highpoint" originally had been scheduled to start Sept. 28, according to allied intelligence, but actually began Oct. 1 as attacks across the country doubled to about 100. Since then the number has ranged between 75 and 100, many of them light rocket and mortar attacks and sabotage.

The Communist command's apparent aim in the Saigon region is to harass government forces with guerrilla type hit-and-run attacks to give the impression of a wide-scale offensive, sources said.

Commanders have said the threat of an all-out assault on Saigon itself is remote, with the enemy forces being capable of only limited activity such as shelling, sapper and terror attacks that would create the illusion of greater strength by "making a lot of noise."

President emerging as monarch, Nader says in report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress does not truly represent the people but is controlled by the president and special-interest groups, especially big business, according to Ralph Nader's $200,000 study of the federal government's law-making branch.

"The White House and the president are emerging in the United States as a new kind of monarchy," said the gadfly of government at a news conference Tuesday heralding the release of the first part of his encyclopedic report on the machinations of Congress and the personalities of lawmakers.

His first release in the planned series of 20 to 30 volumes is a $1.95 paperback entitled "Who Runs Congress—the President, Big Business or You?"

The remainder of the series includes profiles of 486 senators and congressmen, all except those who are retiring or were defeated in primary elections.

Also planned for release before the November election are a series of 11 reports on such topics as redistricting, campaign fund-raising and party organization in Congress; 13 studies of Capitol Hill committees, and two other paperbacks—a citizen's handbook and a congressman's handbook. The latter is designed to aid the lawmakers in becoming more representative of their constituents.

Nader offered the over-all conclusion that the people could control Congress if they could lobby more vigorously, vote against lethargic and unrepresentative lawmakers and back the conscientious ones more fervently.

Nader also described the Nixon administration as more corrupt than those of Ulysses S. Grant and Warren G. Harding. "It is easily the most corrupt administration, because they have more to be corrupt about," he said at a news conference.

But he said he wasn't taking sides in the election and added he didn't think any candidate can "make the changes I think are necessary."

The book says Congress has become "the broken branch" and has handed over its powers one by one to President Nixon. As examples, it says Nixon has made law by regulation, has been given a free hand in foreign affairs, has used executive power to write laws, refuses to spend the money Congress has appropriated and has made 4,000 executive agreements that are, in effect, treaties.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

A Room Full of Bed

DEAR HELEN: Can you tell me why home builders keep making bedrooms smaller and smaller, while furniture makers keep making beds bigger and bigger?

I read the other day that king- and queen-sized beds were closing standard sizes out of the market. My wife read it too, so she order us a king-size monster which, when it came, left us not even enough space to chase each other comfortably around the bedroom.

Now I like a long bed that I can stretch out in, but I see no need for all that width, not if you're as compatible as we are. (Both of us sleep in the middle.) And I like to be able to open my dresser drawers all the way.

Are these big beds just a fad and, if not, when will architects make bedrooms to fit them—for middle income people?—2 x 6 MAN WITH 6'4" x 7 1/2' BED IN 10 x 10 ROOM

DEAR 2 x 6: Happy Day! I was beginning to think no one sided with me against king-sized beds. Now that I've found a friend, I dare express my views, which are: Not only do king-sizers usurp needed space, but they're expensive (those blankets, spreads and sheets!) and they're the very dickens to make.

Architects, bedroom furniture manufacturers: Take note!—H.

DEAR HELEN: In answer to the former fat girl who yearned to wear a bikini but her mother was shocked, you said, "Times are changing—bikinis don't even fetch stares any more."

In 10 years I think women will be swimming topless as men do now. Put that in your prediction book and see if I am right.—FRANK

DEAR FRANK: Friend, you aren't abreast of the times! Out in California girls are already swimming topless at certain public beaches. Authorities say they are within the law (if not the bra), and guess what: after the first few startled stares, they are largely ignored—I'm told—H.

DEAR HELEN: Lately there have been more articles against legalized abortion than for it. Here are my somewhat different opinions.

All over this country people are dying at various rates for various lacks. They die slowly because they lack proper nutrition, proper housing, medical treatment, things they marginally cannot afford. They die rapidly because they run a car's brakes or tires too many miles—no money for replacements. They die from lack of proper rest, holding down two jobs to make the budget balance. In general, they are loved and wanted people we hate to lose.

When society forbids an abortion it is forcing the creation of a specifically unwanted human, which is a trifle ghastly for that human, but also forces the diversion of some of society's resources to his maintenance. At the same time we're creating new "lacks" from overcrowding, increased taxes (for welfare), etc., and thus affecting the rate at which "wanted" people die.

Foretelling an abortion doesn't, in this society, result in a net gain in life. Somewhere we are hustling a wanted person into dying to make room for an unwanted person. It's a swap, and a pretty poor one.

I've heard some talk about voting referendums on the subject. How about we start in now to make sure it's a fair election with only qualified voters... I mean women of child-bearing age, of course.—DAVID

DEAR HELEN: I don't think aborting a "potential" child is murder, but I do think that every woman considering abortion should have counseling first—and it must be HER decision, not that of parents, husband, boyfriend, friends. Many abortion clinics offer such counseling—insist on it.—OUGHTA BE A LAW FOR ALL

Stripes score fashion points

By HELEN HENNESSY
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—A star was born when stripes were created way back when.

While many patterns are prone to fads or current influences, be it geometrics one day, miniature florals the next, with Oriental prints in the wind, stripes have managed to be the anchor pattern of all times.

Their influence is never out of touch.

Striped clothes will account for some heavy line-age in the coming months.

Gianni Ferri, Bonff's Italian designer, uses stripes as a means to an end.

The result is a group of innovative knitted clothes that look different from anything you could have pinned down in past seasons.

Ankle-length clothes, now everyone's favorite gear for going out, staying in and all leisure hours, go the route of dresses which actually look like skirts and sweaters. The solid tops are attached to beautifully striped soft skirts.

Rugby-striped shirts and sweaters are part of the stepped-up traditional flavor that is taking over for fall. White collars and cuffs update these shirts, then add a shirtry jacket or cropped hip-tip jacket, a pair of wide-legged trousers and it all spells "right now."

Ferri's collection integrates stripes into many layered looks. Sometimes they go off in all directions forming V's. Others are slanted on the bias.

No matter what the destination, the most scenic and sure route between two points is stripes.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Round and round they go, stripes from hips to ankles, in brilliant shades of red, gold and green, attached to a black sweater top (left). Mitered striped top (right) looks like two layers, but the solid open-work sleeves and striped turtleneck are actually attached to the striped body. Wide-legged trousers have stitched-down cuffs. Both ankle-length dress and pantsuit in wool knit. (Designed by Gianni Ferri for Bonff.)

This year Columbus Day will be on Monday, Oct. 9, and 21 communities across the nation that have the name Columbus will be represented at the three-

QUICK POTATO SALAD

An interesting way to use a convenience food.
1 package (5 1/8 ounces) scalloped potatoes
3 cups water
1 cup chopped celery
1/3 cup sliced pimiento-stuffed green olives

4 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
1 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup vinegar
Combine potato slices from the package of scalloped potatoes with water in a saucepan; cover, bring to a boil and simmer until tender—about 15 minutes. Drain and cool. Mix with celery, olives and eggs.

Stir together contents of envelope of seasoning mix from potato package, mayonnaise and vinegar; toss with potato mixture. Serve with lettuce, tomatoes and cucumber. Makes 4 servings.

Good Foundation

If facial hair is prominent or wrinkles and laugh lines are deep, the best type of make-up to use is a translucent foundation with moisturizer. A void all matte or chalky make-up or powdery finishes which will only attract attention to these flaws.

CANDIDATES FOR POST-MISTRESS GENERAL assemble for mail sorting to show off their qualifications. The uniform of the day? A menswear look by Cinderella in double knit Acrilan® argyle. The left-leaning applicant wears a jumper that means business: a green vest bodice and red, gold and green skirt. Middle-of-the-roader sports the same colors in a shrink sweater and flippy bias skirt, worn over a classic "Stop the Press" red shirt of Kodol and cotton. At the right, the last candidate opts for comfort in the same shrink worn over matching flared pants and a yellow shirt.

There's happiness in Tiger stadium

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Today's most pressing baseball puzzle is, for a change, not which team will win the American League's East Division race. The Detroit Tigers have answered that month-long riddle. Now, the question is whether Tiger Stadium can survive a possible playoff victory by Detroit against Oakland.

When the Tigers clinched the mini-pennant Tuesday night, it set off a chaotic scene as the frantic fans spilled all over the field, tearing up the bases and mobbing the jubilant players. The sea of people lasted for a good half hour with the fans ripping huge tufts of turf out of the infield and outfield and celebrating the title it was said nobody wanted to win.

Detroit finally ended the tug of war that started with four teams, dwindled to three and finally two, by beating off Boston 3-1 and old pro Al Kaline was the hero. The 20-year-veteran drove in the tie-breaking run with a seventh inning single and then scored an insurance run on Carl Yastrzemski's error.

He also raised his arms triumphantly, moments before catching the last-out fly ball that set off the rampage of the fans.

Elsewhere in the American League Tuesday night, West Division champion Oakland lost to California 3-2, Texas shut out Kansas City 3-0, Milwaukee trimmed New York 3-2, Chicago edged Minnesota 5-4 and Cleveland split a doubleheader with Baltimore, winning 6-5 before losing 4-3.

Kaline was the man most responsible for Detroit's surge to the half-pennant. His seventh inning single game the 37-year-old veteran 22 hits in his last 44 at bats.

"The older you get," he said, "the harder it is to get up for every game. But for the big ones like this, it's no problem at all."

Manager Billy Martin, hopping from one champagne-drenched corner to another in the Tiger dressing room, pointed to Kaline as the key to the title run.

"There's not a word I can say. All the superlatives ... I would use them all. There aren't words to describe how he played," said Martin.

The Tigers won the ballgame and the division title in the seventh inning against Luis Tiant, who had been Boston's very best pitcher down the stretch.

Dick McAuliffe, whose first inning error had given the Sox an unearned run, doubled with one out in the seventh and Kaline followed with a single. McAuliffe scored on the hit and Kaline raced to second on the play at the plate.

Bill Lee relieved Tiant and Duke Sims beat out a slow roller off shortstop Luis Aparicio's glove, sending Kaline to third. Next, Norm Cash bounced to Carl Yastrzemski and Kaline broke for home. Yas grabbed the ball, then dropped it as Kaline scored the insurance run.

That was enough to finish the Sox.

"We have no apologies," said Manager Eddie Kasko. "We battled them and nobody expected us to get as far as we did."

Hampton sets Falcon record

NEW YORK (AP) — "I always wondered if I could carry the ball 20 or 25 times a game," Dave Hampton said.

"Now I know." The Atlanta Falcons now know something, too. They've got a strong runner.

"I never expected to do this well," he said after leading Atlanta to a 31-3 National Football League victory over Los Angeles last Sunday, "but you always hope for such a big day and enjoy it."

Hampton set a Falcons' record with 161 yards rushing on 29 carries and scored twice as the Falcons beat the Rams for the first time in 12 games.

For that reason, Hampton was selected today as The Associated Press Offensive Player of the Week in the National Football League.

Blass, feeling no pain, is ready for Reds

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Steve Blass is feeling no discomfort in his right elbow ... and that's a shot in the arm for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"No pain at all, I'm ready," says Blass, indicating his willingness to start the National League playoffs against the Cincinnati Reds Saturday.

Pittsburgh's bread-and-butter pitcher, who was struck in the elbow by a line drive last Sunday, tested the arm in a brief relief appearance Tuesday night as the Pirates defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2.

"The main thing was that the arm felt good and there was no pain," said Blass after giving up a run and walking three batters in two innings.

The performance was good enough for Manager Bill Virdon to confirm Blass' nomination as the Pittsburgh starter in playoff Game No. 1.

"I'm kind of glad that Blass got into a little trouble so that he got a chance to throw a few more pitches," said Virdon.

The Reds tuned up for the playoffs by trimming the Houston Astros 6-1.

Bob Moose pitched the first five innings for Pittsburgh Tuesday night and allowed just one hit as the Pirates took a 6-0 lead.

Al Oliver and Richie Hebner each drove in two runs to supply most of the offensive power as the Pirates teed off on Al Saborini.

Cesar Geronimo and Joe Morgan knocked in two runs

John Wheat:

Ready for SWC

By DAVE BAER

Last Saturday's one-point victory over the University of Tulsa may prove to be crucial to the Arkansas Razorbacks throughout the remainder of the season.

At least, that's how John Wheat feels. The Hogs' stand-out linebacker from Temple, Texas, believes Saturday's 21-20 win over Tulsa might provide Arkansas' defense with the impetus it needs to carry it through the Southwest Conference schedule.

"In the fourth quarter against Tulsa, we were getting after it on defense better than we have at any other time this year," Wheat said Monday as the Razorbacks began preparations for Saturday's SWC opener against Texas Christian (7:30 p.m., Fort Worth). "Something like that has got to help our confidence."

"We're going to need all the experience and help we can get," he added. "TCU always comes out ready to kill."

Wheat, a 6-1, 210-pound junior, has been a "killer" of sorts for the past two weeks. He harassed Oklahoma State's offense for 12 tackles and seven assists, then followed with 11 tackles and 4 assists against Tulsa.

When you ask Wheat about his recent success, however, he points to his fellow linebackers, Danny Rhodes, Ed Rownd and Scott Binnion (who was injured against Tulsa and may be out five to six weeks).

"Danny is fantastic, Scott was just great and Ed has done a tremendous job," he said. "With help like that, how can you go wrong?"

Although Wheat didn't play against Tulsa in 1971 (when the Razorbacks suffered a 21-20 defeat), he admits to being fired up. "Sure, I was looking forward to it," he said. "It offered me a chance to improve on my mistakes of the first two games, and also a chance to get ready for TCU."

Wheat said the key to success at linebacker is simple. "By far the most important thing is learning to read your keys," he said. "If you learn that, then you learn to get to where you're supposed to be on every play. And if you can do that, you can do about anything you want to do."

Playing TCU is especially important to Arkansas, Wheat says. The game offers the Razorbacks an opportunity to get off on the right foot in their bid for the SWC championship, an honor they haven't claimed since 1966.

"Everybody wants to get the first one under our belt," he said. "And then we want to win all the rest. That's our goal - to be there in Dallas on January 1."

Kiwanis Club installs new officers

The Kiwanis Club Program at Tuesday's meeting was devoted to the official installation of the Club Officers who will be serving during the administrative year which started Oct. 1st.

Me-Ark District governor-elect, Dean Murphy, the first district officer ever elected from the local club, was the installing officer.

Murphy, after thanking the retiring board members, installed the newly-elected members of the board of directors—Jimmy Tate, George Wright, Melvin Thrash, and George Frazier. Bill Butler as the immediate past president becomes a member of the board.

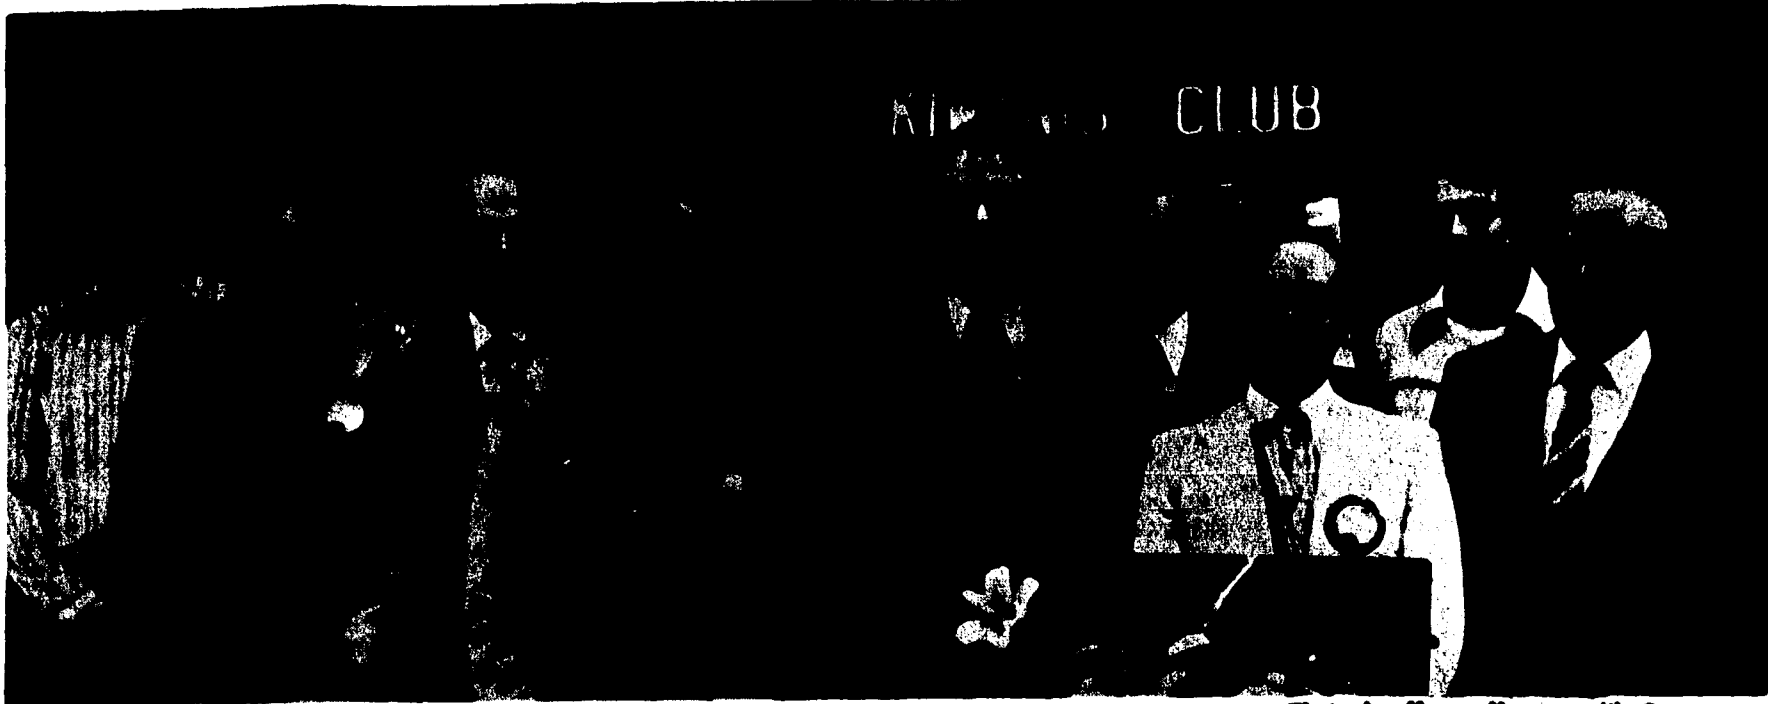

Teddy Jones was installed for another term as club secretary; Clifford Franks was re-elected club treasurer. Murphy had special praise for Teddy Jones, saying that in his work as a club, division, and district officer he had examined the reports of secretaries of many clubs and that Jones was without peer among them.

Next to be installed were David Stewart and Gordon Renshaw, first and second vice presidents, respectively.

Kiwanian Forrest Singleton was then installed as president for the 1972-73 year and instructed in his duties and responsibilities in carrying out the year's objectives—Uniting for Progress and Sharing Your Life.

Mrs. Sparks was the guest of her husband, Kiwanian Mitchell Sparks.

Dock, resort owners trying to get closed trout season

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark. (AP) — A group of resort and dock owners will ask the state Game and Fish Commission at its next meeting to close the trout season in Bull Shoals Lake and the White and North Rivers near here between Oct. 31 and Feb. 28.

A. D. Nuckolls, executive secretary of Bull Shoals Lake and White River Association, said Tuesday the group would appear at the commission meeting Oct. 16-17 in Fort Smith.

He said the dock owners were asking that the action be taken because trout supplies are deteriorating. If the group's recommendation is followed, all trout fishing would be stopped in Bull Shoals Lake and on streams below Bull Shoals to allow time for trout propagation.

"We can live only so long on a reputation," said Forrest Woods of Flippin, a boat service operator. "You can promise only so long before you have to deliver the goods. This area built its fishing reputation on good fishing — not what we have now."

C. B. White of Fairview, who is opposing the closing of the season said he was against the proposal because the trout fishing "was for everybody's use, not just tourists and dock operators."

One resident of the area who opposes the closing said the proposal was originated by "several dock operators who either close up or have a poor business during the winter." The resident, who asked not to be identified, said "they don't have any trade during that time and they don't want anyone else to either."

The group asking that the season be closed also has criticized the Game and Fish Commission.

"They told us two years ago that every penny of the trout stamp would be spent on trout, but they're buying vehicles and paying salaries out of the stamp revenues," Nuckolls said. "They're leaving very little for the trout."

Half of the money from the trout stamps go for the cost of printing, selling and keeping books on the stamps. The other half, according to Andrew Halsey, G&F director, is spent merely to continue the trout program which has existed for a number of years.

Halsey defended the plan, however, saying the commission had been under attack in past years because the trout program was not "paying its own way."

Up until the trout stamp was required, the commission paid the $60,000 annual cost of the trout program with general funds — the money collected from all fishermen — although the program benefitted only those who want to fish for trout.

Tax credit bill clears big hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to give parents of an estimated 5.1 million children in parochial and other nonpublic schools tax credits against their tuition has cleared its first congressional hurdle. But the measure may be lost in the legislative pile-up as Congress pushes for adjournment.

The House Ways and Means Committee Tuesday approved the measure that would allow parents to deduct from their income tax up to $200 in tuition paid for each child in a nonpublic elementary or secondary school, but not in kindergarten or college. For families with income above $18,000, the credit would be scaled down.

The credit would be a straight offset against income tax paid, not a deduction from taxable income.

The tax credit has been a major objective of Roman Catholic bishops and some spokesmen for other private schools. Both President Nixon and Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic candidate, have endorsed the principle.

However, there is strong opposition from civil-liberties and other groups which contend the credit would be an indirect provision of public funds for religious purposes and therefore would violate the Constitution.

The committee is to take one more vote on the measure when the language is perfected, but is not expected to change it substantially. The panel included a number of provisions relating to the constitutional question:

—No cash payments would be provided for families whose income is so low that they owe little or no income tax.

—The measure provides for a quick court test.

—The tuition would have to be paid to a tax-exempt school, which would cover parochial and many nonprofit private schools. But spokesmen said it would exclude private academies set up to avoid racial integration in public schools, since these have not been accorded tax exemption.

—The credit would be limited to 50 per cent of tuition, on the theory that this would cover the secular, but not the religious, component of education provided.

Sponsors said they intend to expedite handling of the bill but acknowledged that the outlook is doubtful if Congress adjourns next week, as leaders plan.

Hanoi notebook: Traveling behind enemy lines

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

Vietnam is the first foreign war where Americans have regularly gone behind enemy lines to see what is happening and to write about it. Many had been to North Vietnam before me, but I was still not prepared for what I found.

Maybe this was because I had spent nearly ten years looking at the North from the vantage point of South Vietnam. My ten days visit was often unnerving.

I had to resist a compulsion to run whenever People's Army soldiers came by in their baggy green uniforms, their Ho Chi Minh rubber tire sandals, their oversized pitch helmets emblazoned with the red star.

On the battlefields of South Vietnam these were the enemy. As a reporter with the Allied forces, I was fair game for their bullets.

Now behind the lines in Hanoi, these same soldiers walked by me with little more than a curious look as they humped their small canvas rucksacks behind them.

I had another compulsion while I was there with a delegation of antiwar activists. That was to run away from the American war planes that sometimes wheeled high in the sky above.

Many a night I had sat in the ward rooms of Seventh Fleet carriers in the South China Sea, or balanced drinks in the officers' clubs of U.S. air bases in South Vietnam, and heard the pilots talking animatedly of their air attacks that day against the North.

Now I was a visitor to the target area. At one point I travelled a slow-moving ferry across a river near Nam Dinh with its bridge destroyed and I started thinking about what would happen if U.S. aircraft came over and bombed us. I could visualize the bland announcement later that day at the military press briefing in Saigon: "Targets today included strikes against a ferry route of Nam Dinh. Damage heavy."

The planes didn't come near, but I could see that the awareness of their destructive potential was shared by my three travelling companions — Air Force Maj. Edward Elias and Navy Lt. Mark Gertley and Norris Charles, prisoners of war just released by the North Vietnamese.

As combat officers, they had been much more conditioned to viewing the North Vietnamese as enemies than I was. The first Vietnamese Gertley ever saw in his life was the farmer who captured him after he was shot down four years ago.

Now they were guests of the enemy, comfortably riding old Russian sedans and sipping warm beer as the ruins of bombed railway sidings and factories slid by the windows. When children started cheering the pilots at hamlets along the way I felt that the North Vietnamese sense of forgiveness knew no bounds, until I discovered that everyone thought we were Russian technicians.

If the sense of forgiveness was naturally enough restrained, the sense of hospitality was not. The food was sumptuous. Three-egg breakfasts served with Hanoi-canned pineapple juice, black bread and coffee from the highlands began each day.

Three meat courses came each lunch. Dinner at night in the once-ornate but now faded dining room of the Hoa Binh Hotel was usually more of the same French cuisine, or a Vietnamese banquet of a dozen courses.

And this in a country that allows each person only a little more than an ounce of meat a day.

It was this avalanche of food that seemed to finally convince the three pilots that they were free.

"I used to dream that when I got out I would eat meat until I was stuffed with it. That would be true freedom," said Gertley. He had an opportunity to do that every meal. The Defense Department revealed itself at Moscow Airport where a party of official American newcomers included a Maj. Ronald F. Walker who said he was the embassy doctor.

The three pilots turned down the offer of a U.S. Air Force medical evacuation plane which was waiting at Copenhagen airport. Walker joined us for the ride home. At one point, he sat with me and praised both my professional abilities and personal character. I was suitably flattered.

But the major revealed his true nature later when he appeared from the first class lounge an hour out of New York with the uniformed soldiers at his elbow. Tempers at this point in the journey were hot, with the peace group claiming the Defense Department was breaking its promise, and Walker insisting the pilots were under military jurisdiction.

As I raised my camera, Walker turned on me, and flailing his arms he cried loudly, "No pictures!"

I took the picture anyway. In Hanoi if I had disobeyed such a command I would have had my film confiscated. All Walker could do was glare.

I knew I was back in the West.

Boyleing it down

NEW YORK (AP) — The man I feel sorriest for in America is the man who doesn't like his job or enjoy his work.

Of course, all of us at times complain about the ordeal by which we earn our daily bread. We may dislike the hours we work or find the man at the next desk or machine a dull nonentity, the girls in the office homely, the straw boss an anachronistic Neanderthal, or become annoyed because the office cafeteria serves too few spaghetti with the spaghetti.

But, on the whole, most of us are reasonably content with the work we do and wish only that it would pay better.

It must be horribly galling to the soul, however, actually to hate your work and feel you are wasting your life in it. The feeling must be akin to that of a wild animal when its foot gets caught in a trap from which it realizes it cannot escape.

A man who hates his job is almost as bad off as a man who hates his wife.

As other pastures look greener to us, so do other jobs look more attractive at times. But there can be solace to us, too, in the realization that other jobs could be worse than the one we have, whatever its faults. Name a few? All right, why not? Think how much happier you are at your present job than you would be if you were—

The doorman to Hell during a heat wave.

The social director of a convict ship.

Lassie's understudy during an off-the-scene barking role.

Owner of the hatchback concession at a nudist colony.

A vegetarian in a sausage-stuffing factory.

Supply officer for Dracula.

Valet at a hippie commune.

Orthopedist for Joe Namath.

Customs inspector on duty when someone is caught smuggling Pandora's Box into the country.

A fat Christian in a Coliseum full of thin lions.

A new broom in City Hall.

A comedian on an afternoon television soap opera.

A pacifist in Belfast.

A liquor store owner in Mecca.

Abbie Hoffman's barber.

Security guard at the Watergate.

Press agent for the Vietnamese war.

Diogenes.

Think it over. Perhaps you should thank your stars for the job you have.

Monkeys used in testing

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A memory-taxing exercise for smart monkeys may be the key to ultimately developing a surgical treatment for language loss in stroke victims, a scientist reports.

For the past year, Dr. James H. Dewson III, head of the hearing and speech sciences section of the Division of Otolaryngology at the Stanford Medical School, has been teaching 13 monkeys to recognize sounds and to push color buttons to test their memories. Through this system of measuring a monkey's short-range memory capacity, Dewson said he hopes eventually to determine why memory is impaired after a stroke damages the language-specializing part of the brain.

"The monkeys are still in training," Dewson said in an interview Tuesday. "It's fascinating. A lot of people, my colleagues, said it couldn't be done."

For his monkey school, Dewson chose 13 Macaque-trush monkeys, which are highly intelligent yet smaller and less expensive than chimpanzees.

Working under a $75,000 National Science Foundation grant at a Palo Alto Veterans Hospital laboratory, he first trained the animals to recognize sequence of tones and noises.

Upward Bound, pre-college prep program, growing

By JAMIE ROBGOD

Joe is a high school junior. Because of financial problems and a lack of interest in school, he may never graduate.

But someone, a teacher perhaps, sees something in Joe. Someone sees that he could be college material if he had a chance—some financial aid coupled with a little encouragement and some extra educational experience. What can this person do to help Joe? He can recommend him to Upward Bound.

"Upward Bound is a pre-college prep program designed specifically to assist economically and culturally disadvantaged youngsters," Dr. Charles Chambliss, director of Ouachita University's branch of the program, said.

Ouachita houses one of six federally-funded Upward Bound programs in Arkansas and one of about 300 across the nation. Serving high schools within a 50-mile radius of Arkadelphia, the OBU center recruits 57 high school students for the program each year.

These students "must meet poverty program criteria and have the potential for college work as observed by a teacher, a principal, a minister," Dr. Chambliss said. "by someone who is willing to say, 'Here's a youngster whose home situation, whose income is such that unless he gets some help, he probably is not going to go to college.'"

"But with some help in terms of financial assistance, in terms of motivation, then he's a good risk. I would recommend him."

The students are recruited only from schools that agree to participate in the program.

The Upward Bound program consists mainly of two summer phases: the "non-bridge" phase for high school seniors and the "bridge" phase for members who have just graduated from high school.

Under the "non-bridge" phase, the Upward Bound recruits come to Ouachita for a special six-week session of "summer school."

Dr. Chambliss explained the purpose of this session. "Our intent is simply to expose them to some new and different, exciting material and to try to find where their problems are and how we can assist them in having a good senior year."

Although each student takes a schedule of courses tailored to fit his individual needs, all are required to attend classes in certain subjects such as English, math and music.

According to Dr. Chambliss, approximately two-thirds enroll in a remedial reading course.

Students are also allowed to choose other courses, such as art and photography, which interest them. Two hours of recreation are also scheduled each day.

Most of the students' time is spent in class so there is no "homework." Neither are there any tests or grades. Much of the work is done competitively or on a sort of reward system.

"If a student comes to class and demonstrates that he understands the skills being learned that day, he may not have to stay the whole class period," Dr. Chambliss explained.

One out-of-state field trip is usually planned each summer as well as several shorter trips within Arkansas. Last summer, students visited Memphis where they saw a stage production, art galleries and other points of interest. They also rode a steamboat down the Mississippi River.

In-state trips included visits to a Travellers' baseball game, the Arkansas Arts Center and a Little Rock restaurant. As a recreational activity, they visited a skating rink in Malvern once a week.

While at Ouachita, all the students' bills are paid by the federal government. This includes such things as medical and dental expenses besides room and board and other school fees. Students are also given money and allowed to buy their own clothes in Arkadelphia stores.

When the students return to their high schools for their senior year, Upward Bound keeps in touch.

"We have representatives who work for us in each of the high schools who agree to counsel the students...to assist us in setting up tutoring sessions if the student is having difficulties in subject matter...to inform us of any needs that the student may have in terms of personal needs, family situation or maybe needs within the school," Dr. Chambliss said.

One Saturday each month during the school year, the Upward Bound students are brought back to Ouachita for a "get-together." At these meetings, the students' needs are discussed and experts are often brought in to discuss such topics as drug abuse, dental care and venereal disease.

In these sessions, Upward Bound tries to "deal in areas where we can be of service not only to the person but also to his family," Dr. Chambliss said.

Following graduation from high school, the students enter the "bridge" phase of the program. They come to Ouachita as regularly enrolled college freshmen for both summer sessions of classes.

The federal government again pays all the bills and will pick up the tab for up to six hours of classes each term. The students follow the same program as other college freshmen except for two-hour tutoring sessions four days each week.

When summer school is over, Upward Bound's work with these students is finished.

"At the end of this summer phase for the bridge student, Upward Bound can be of no more assistance legally," Dr. Chambliss said.

"When they complete the summer here, we, by that time, have gotten them in any college that they're interested in going to with as much financial aid as we can get that college to give them. We can't give them anything."

Dr. Chambliss added, "The evidence is quite clear that the student can make it from this point on."

Since the program began at OBU in 1968, "approximately 80 per cent of the students that we have worked with have entered college," Dr. Chambliss said. Of that number, about 75 per cent have come to Ouachita.

The Ouachita office currently works with students from Spartanburg, Carthage, Harmony Grove, Bearden, Lake Hamilton, Glenwood, Chidester, Arkadelphia and Malvern high schools.

SHORT RIBS

Quarrels cause serious illness

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—My husband is psychosomatic. We cannot sit down and discuss our problems like most married couples do, because if he doesn't agree with me, instead of saying so, he will get seriously ill. Several times I have had to rush him to the hospital. I have been told that it is in his mind but it could be fatal and it has been suggested to him that he see a psychiatrist, but he has refused. Would you please explain more about this as to what it is and what can be done.

Dear Reader—Psychosomatic refers to the fact that the mind (psycho) and the body (soma) both work together in maintaining our health or being affected by illness. Anxiety on an emotional basis for example, can cause severe diarrhea or constipation. Long standing anxiety can cause increased acid secretions in the stomach and lead to ulcers.

Somatic or medical illness can in turn cause anxiety. A person who has leukemia has every reason to have anxiety and so does the woman who has cancer of the breast. Then you have the problem of an individual who has severe heart disease caused by medical illness such as fatty deposits in the arteries to the heart. If he becomes angry during an emotional crisis, this can increase the work of his heart and cause other changes that may even cause a heart attack and has been known to cause death. Thus the term psychosomatic really means you just can't separate the mind from the body or the body from the mind.

Your letter suggests to me that an emotional crisis with your husband seriously affects the function of his body, causing pain or disability. The body usually functions better in the presence of emotional health and freedom from anxiety or emotional conflicts. Psychiatrists are often successful in helping free people from anxiety and emotional conflicts, which in turn improves their physical health. The suggestion that your husband see a psychiatrist is a sound one. He is no different from other people except that his reaction is apparently more severe and disabling. All of us are affected emotionally by our health and our health is affected by our emotions.

There are lots of ways of bidding to six hearts. One shown in the box is based on the fact that North's three-club bid was a slam try of some sort and his four-heart bid showed that it was in hearts. South's five-heart bid asked partner to go to six with good hearts and North obliged.

South wins the diamond lead and plays the two top hearts. If hearts broke, there would be no trouble with the slam, but West discards the deuce of diamonds and there is a sure heart loser.

South doesn't give up. There is a simple way to play the hand, which is to ruff his last diamond in dummy, play spades and eventually throw East in with his high trump. East will have to lead a club and if the club honors are split South will be able to avoid

Dear Dr. Lamb—My friends and I eat lots of lemons on salads and juices and just plain with just salt on them. Now we're told that they "thin" your blood, and like eggs and chocolate, are constipating. Since there are many "lemon fans" around, please comment.

Dear Reader—In a word, nonsense. Lemons are excellent food but of course like all other foods, shouldn't be used to the exclusion of other important food elements. Some individuals with specific medical problems like ulcers, might not be able to tolerate a lot of lemon juice just as they can't tolerate other fruit or acid foods. None of the things that you list, lemons, eggs or chocolate are constipating.

the loss of a club trick. South does ruff the diamond and he plays three rounds of spades. East follows to the third spade and South should stop a moment and try to count the hand.

He can't get an exact count but he knows that East started with three spades, three hearts and some number of diamonds. West led the three of that suit and played the deuce next.

If South decides that West started with five diamonds, that gives East the same number and leaves him just two clubs.

Now South changes his plan and cashes the two top clubs before throwing East in. East doesn't have a club left and has to give South a ruff and discard.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The song "Dixie" was first introduced by Daniel Emmett at Mechanics Hall in New York City, April 4, 1850. The World Almanac says. He wrote the song for Bryant's Minstrels and performed it as a black-faced singer. Emmett allegedly wrote the song after an actor who had toured the South lamented New York's weather and said, "I wish I were down in Dixie."

Men who survived syphilis study were 'rewarded'

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the black men who survived the first 25 years of a federal syphilis experiment in Alabama, the reward was a certificate of appreciation from the U.S. Public Health Service.

It read in part: "In grateful recognition of 25 years of active participation in the Tuskegee medical research study."

It was dated 1968 and signed by Leroy E. Burney, then U.S. surgeon general, and now president of the New York foundation which, for 40 years, has underwritten the cost of burying victims of the Tuskegee Study.

Dr. Burney said in an interview he did not recall the certificates and did not know who decided to distribute them.

Burney was surgeon general in the Eisenhower administration from 1966 to 1968. In 1971, he became president of the Milbank Memorial Fund after serving on the foundation's technical board and board of directors for several years.

For the past 40 years, the Milbank Fund has been associated with the PHS Alabama syphilis experiment, known as the Tuskegee Study.

The study began in 1932 in Macon County, Ala. Over the years, at least 430 syphilitic black men were never given treatment for their disease so that PHS doctors could determine through eventual autopsy what damage untreated syphilis does to the human body.

At least 28 of the men who participated died as a direct result of untreated syphilis.

Dr. Burney joined the Public Health Service in 1932, the year the Tuskegee Study got underway, and worked in the venereal-disease branch of PHS for the next nine years.

He learned of the study a few years after joining PHS, Burney said, and added that he couldn't find fault with it in its early years.

"In 1936 or 1938 I became aware of what was going on in Tuskegee," he said. "Recognizing that there was a high degree of serology (indication of syphilis infection) among Southern blacks and recognizing the hazardous nature of the treatment available at the time, it probably was a well-conceived study."

Burney said he also could not determine why the Milbank Fund had decided to underwrite the study, paying for the autopsies and burial of Tuskegee Study participants.

"I've looked through all of our records—all that we still have—and there's nothing there to show why we were asked to do this or why PHS didn't do it themselves," he said.

The early costs of underwriting the experiment ran around $800 a year and this year's grant from the foundation was $1,300, Burney said.

There will be no more autopsy bills, however, Burney said he was notified several weeks ago that the autopsy portion of the Tuskegee Study has been ended.

Editor's Note—This is the first of two articles on the new management plan at Harvard University, a plan that university officials feel has wide application to other universities.

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Universities seldom have won honors for financial acumen or administrative know-how, despite their other intellectual qualities.

They have done a certain amount of long-range planning, says Stephen Hall, vice president of Harvard, but "in general, they haven't been too intelligent about how they used their money."

When Hall was hired to handle a $40-million administrative budget early last year he found his 10 departments using "municipal accounting," or spending against a set sum and hoping to have something left.

His inheritance, Hall said, was an elaborate system for keeping track of costs, of accounting for money already spent, but with less emphasis on plotting the most effective use of the money in achieving university goals.

"Only one department broke down its budget on a monthly basis," said Hall, a former director of operations support at ITT-Sheraton. Without such a breakdown, progress couldn't be monitored or corrections begun.

Hall now claims that these same department heads have become so financially aware and proficient that, as a team, "they could go into many a large corporation and effect a 100 per cent improvement."

Moreover, he added, Harvard would like to share its knowledge with other universities. "We'll all come out better off if we do. We're all in the same business."

The Harvard administrative plan began to take shape with weekly staff meetings of Hall and the administrators, whose responsibilities ranged from the university press to food services to buildings and grounds, and so on.

From these meetings — strictly limited to one early morning hour because "staff meetings fail if they are strung out" — Hall and the administrators began working out a written management plan made up of seven basic elements.

The first of these in the current management plan, the mission, is always stated in one sentence. This, Hall feels, forces each administrator to define sharply the contribution his department should make to the university.

Next, each administrator lists the scope of his job, the parameters of his responsibility, and lists also the amount that should be required to maintain that scope. Assumptions underlying the budget also are listed.

In food services, for example, G. Graham Huriburt assumes, among other things, "that the cost of raw food will increase 7 per cent."

The next element is called "future impact," and it includes all those contingencies that might impact the plan. In this category, Huriburt lists "union negotiations—spring 1973. Pressure will be on the side of higher wages..."

Following that, objectives are listed, both for the immediate year and for the next five. "To effectively integrate the combined work forces of Harvard and Radcliffe," is one near-term objective.

There follows a summation, in which the administrator verbalizes his concerns and hopes. The final section includes the usual charts, "but now they are tied into a system that makes them meaningful."

Before the final draft of the management plan is printed, Hall sits down individually with the administrators for a head to head, adversary discussion of the contents. These may last four hours. Sometimes there are several meetings.

Although these sessions can be blunt and grating, Hall claims that when the two men leave the room they leave behind their frictions, that they have reached a consensus, and that they are both committed to a common goal.

"This is where many institutions, corporations included, fail," he said. "They call it management by objectives but what they mean is that they set the objectives and you get fired if you don't meet them."

Instead, "we negotiate objectives and we both become committed to them. Negotiation leads to total commitment."

It is from this management book that Hall obtains the overall view of his operations. It is the basis also for a monthly progress report that is submitted to the president and the administrative visiting committee.

Musker, a friend who visited her at the hospital where she was under treatment for drug use.

Miss Faithfull, former girlfriend of Rolling Stones lead singer Mick Jagger, talked to newsmen for the first time since her three-month convalescence.

Smiling and holding Musker's hand, the 25-year-old blonde said, "I have never met a nicer man in my life. He is a perfect gentleman and quite a change from showbiz people ... He visited me all the time at Bexley and helped pull me through."

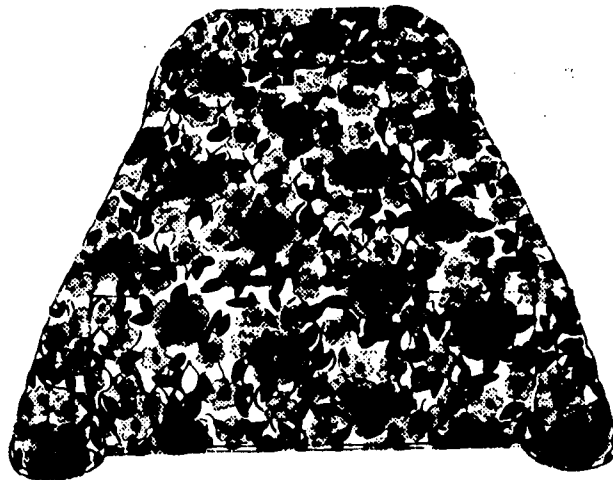

Miss Faithfull said she and Musker, 23, plan to take a three-week vacation on the South Pacific island of Bali. Asked if they planned to marry, she replied, "You don't need to, do you?"

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — World chess champion Bobby Fischer has praised the Russian from whom he won the title, Boris Spassky, as polite and a "real gentleman."

Fischer told students and faculty at the Worldwide Church of God's Ambassador College here Tuesday that he had learned only recently that Spassky refrained from smoking during the championship tournament out of courtesy to the American challenger. Fischer is a nonsmoker.

Fischer spent an hour and a half explaining basic chess moves to an audience of about 800.
